

Dr Hans-Peter Deutsch

Partner

Dr Hans-Peter Deutsch is one of the founders of d-fine, a leading financial services consulting firm in Europe with offices in Frankfurt, Munich, London and Hong Kong. Before founding this firm he was Partner at Arthur Andersen and head of Andersen's "Financial and Commodity Risk Consulting (FCRC)" in Germany, which he founded in 1997 and developed from scratch to the over 250 people strong consulting practice which is d-fine today.

Before joining Arthur Andersen, he headed trading systems development at a major German Bank and served as a consultant with Andersen Consulting (now Accenture). He holds a "summa cum laude" Ph.D. in theoretical physics and is also author of about 20 international scientific publications in this field, mainly on Monte Carlo simulations of stochastic processes.

Dr Deutsch has worked with clients in many IT-based and quantitative trading and risk management projects, including software selection and development, pricing and risk management for derivatives. Dr Deutsch is author of many publications in this area including books on quantitative portfolio management, derivatives pricing and risk management. His classical textbook Derivatives and Internal Models is now in its 4th Edition.

Dr Deutsch is also Guest Lecturer and Member of the Advisory Board of the Mathematical Finance Programme at the University of Oxford, UK. In addition, he is Chairman of the Advisory Board of the MathFinance Institute at Johann Wolfgang Goethe-Universität in Frankfurt, Germany. He is also member of the supervisory board of GET-Capital AG, a German asset management firm, which manages large asset portfolios for institutional investors using a state of the art quantitative method and software system developed by Dr Deutsch.

As of July 2010, with the consultancy firm d-fine now being well established and running smoothly without his help, Dr Deutsch decided to step out of the business world and devote his life to his great passion and become a yoga teacher.
