

Markus von Rothkirch

Partner

Markus von Rothkirch is a Founding Partner of d-fine, one of the leading financial services consulting firms in Europe focusing on quantitative and system integration projects. His career in the financial services sector began at Andersen Consulting (now accenture), where he worked in the “Financial and Commodity Risk Consulting (FCRC)” group in Germany. By playing a key role in building this group, he became the youngest partner ever in Germany in 1999. Before he joined Arthur Andersen in 1997, he was an independent consultant specializing in risk management and trading systems.

Mr. von Rothkirch managed many projects in the trading, risk management & controlling, accounting, ALM and corporate treasury area. These projects ranged from system selection, introduction of trading-, treasury and risk management systems to the conceptual design and implementation of management information systems and processes. Many of these implementation projects were designed to comply with the legal requirements arising from CAD, Basel II, and IAS/IFRS. In addition to many leading banks, he has also advised corporate treasuries at large companies.

He gained his combined master degree in computer science and business administration at the Technical University of Darmstadt.
